

Barick Chung

C022-present Associate Professor (Teaching), Economics, CUSZSZ. 2014-2022 Senior Lecturer, School of Management and Economics, CUSZSZ. 2012-2014. Lecturer, School of Economics and Finance, University of Hong Kong. 2006-2012 Instructor, Department of Economics, CUHKHK.

Education: 2003-2007 Ph.D. (Business) Indiana University – Bloomington. 1987-1991 BS.Sc. (Economics) Chinese University of Hong Kong – Hong Kong.

Research paper:
Chung, Barick, "Two Level Price Discrimination and Vertical Relationship" (March 05, 2012). Available at SSRN: http://ssrn.com/abstract=1997070.

Homepage: Deleted Facebook: Deleted Wechat ID: barickchung

ECO 2011 (Sections L07-10) Basic Microeconomics

Barick Chung Department of Economics 235-18822 Zhiren Building, 409 barickchung@cuhk.edu.cn

20:23:07

An Inquiry into the Nature and Causes of the Wealth of Nations (1776)

Division of labor

Natural law vs. Natural liberty

Order vs. Chaos in society

Market and Self-adjusting mechanism

Wealth creation

20:23:07

_
-
-
-
-
-
-
_
_
_
_
_
_
_
_
_
_
-

Cowen, Tyler, and Alex Tabarrok, 2013, Modern Principles of Economics, 2nd edition, Worth Publishers, p.13:

(1) Trade makes people better off when preferences differ.

(2) Trade increases prodictivity through specialization and the division of knowledge.

Suppose that now Tom specializes completely by allocating all 6 hours to picking bananas, and Nancy specializes completely by allocating all 6 nours to picking apples.

Nancy's new production: 24 apples 2 bananas Tom's new production: 0 apples 2 bananas

Total new output : 24 apples + 24 bananas

24 + 24

20:23:07

9

Nancy's new production: 24 apples + 0 bananas Tom's new production: 0 apples + 24 bananas  Suppose that Tom trades 12 bananas with Nancy in return for 12 apples.  Nancy' new consumption 12 apples + 12 bananas Tom's new consumption 12 apples - 12 bananas Tom's new consumption 12 apples - 12 bananas  20 22:07 10  David Ricardo (1772 – 1820)  Tomad Ricardo (1772 – 1820)  Tomad Ricardo (1772 – 11 September 1823) was an English political economist, other credited with systematicing conomistic, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential of the descared economist, and was one of the most influential o		-
David Ricardo (1772 – 1823) Tom's new consumption 12 apples 12 hananas  20:23:07  10  David Ricardo (1772 – 1823) Tabultum subcoas considerable pressure of the most influential of the classical economist, often credited with systematicing economics, and was one of the most influential of the classical economist, and was one of the most influential of the classical economist, and with subcompany the considerable persons fortune. Perhaps his most important contribution was the law of comparative advantage, a fundamental argument in favor of free trade and of specialization among individuals. Ricardo argued that there is mutual benefit from trade for exchange) individuals. Ricardo sagued that there is mutual benefit from trade for exchange) productive in very possible area than list fading counterpart (e.g. resource poor country, unskilled laborer), as long as each concentrates on the activities where it has a relative productivity advantage.	Tom's new production : 0 apples + 24 bananas
David Ricardo (1772 – 1823)  Into Line Selection Control Michael Ricardo Recommendado (19 April 1772 – 11 September 1823) was an English political economist, often credited with systematizing economics, and was one of the most influential of the classical economists, along with Thomas Matthus, Adam Smith, and John Stuart Mill. He was also a member of Parlament, businessman, financier and speculator, who amassed a considerable personal fortune. Perhaps his most important contribution was the law of comparative advantage, a fundamental argument in favor of free trade among countries and of specialization among individuals. Recardo argued that there is mutual benefit from trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more even if one party (e.g., resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) i	12 apples.  Nancy' new consumption 12 apples + 12 bananas
(1772 – 1823)  http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/David Ricardo accessed 2010/115  "David Ricardo (19 April 1772 – 11 September 1823) was an English political economist, often credited with systematizing economics, and was one of the most influential of the classical economists, along with Thomas Malthus, Adam Smith, and John Stuart Mill. He was also a member of Parliament, businessman, financier and speculator, who amassed a considerable personal fortune. Perhaps his most important contribution was the law of comparative advantage, a fundamental argument in favor of free trade among countries and of specialization among individuals. Ricardo argued that there is mutual benefit from trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g. resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trading counterpart (e.g. resource-poor country, unskilled alabore), as long as each concentrates on the activities where it has a relative productivity advantage."	20:23:07 10
(1772 – 1823)  http://hen.wikipedia.org/wiki/David Ricardo accessed 20101115  "David Ricardo (19 April 1772 – 11 September 1823) was an English political economist, often credited with systematizing economics, and was one of the most influential of the classical economists, along with Thomas Malthus, Adam Smith, and John Stuart Mill. He was also a member of Parliament, businessman, financier and speculator, who amassed a considerable personal fortune. Perhaps his most important contribution was the law of comparative advantage, a fundamental argument in favor of free trade among countries and of specialization among individuals. Ricardo argued that there is mutual benefit from trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g. resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trading counterpart (e.g. resource-poor country, unskilled labore), as long as each concentrates on the activities where it has a relative productivity advantage."	David Ricardo economist, often credited with systematizing economics, and was one of the most influential of the classical economists, along with Thomas Malthus, Adam Smith, and John Stuart Mill. He was also a member of Parliament, businessman, financier and speculator, who amassed a considerable personal fortune. Perhaps his most important contribution was the law of comparative advantage, a fundamental argument in favor of free trade among countries and of specialization among individuals. Ricardo argued that there is mutual benefit from trade (or exchange) even if one party (e.g. resource-rich country, highly-skilled aritisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trading counterpart (e.g. resource-poor country, unskilled alproit, as long as each concentrates on the activities where it has a relative productivity advantage."	(1772 – 1823) http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/David_Ricardo accessed 20110115
even if one party (e.g. resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trading counterpart (e.g. resource-poor country, unskilled laborer), as long as each concentrates on the activities where it has a relative productivity advantage."	economist, often credited with systematizing economics, and was one of the most influential of the classical economists, along with Thomas Malthus, Adam Smith, and John Stuart Mill. He was also a member of Parliament, businessman, financier and speculator, who amassed a considerable personal fortune. Perhaps his most important contribution was the law of comparative advantage, a fundamental argument in favor of free trade among countries and of specialization among
20:23:07	even if one party (e.g. resource-rich country, highly-skilled artisan) is more productive in every possible area than its trading counterpart (e.g. resource-poor country, unskilled laborel), as long as each concentrates on the activities where it
	20:23:07	